About the August N. Christenson Research and Education Building...

At the heart of the University of Nebraska Agricultural Research and Development Center (ARDC) is the 23,000 square foot August N. Christenson Research and Education Building. This world class facility is equipped with state of the art data and information transmission equipment, a computer training room, a library, and laboratories. In addition, the Christenson Building has an auditorium, conference rooms, and exhibition hall to accommodate programs of 600 participants.

The August N. Christenson Research and Education Building meshes together administrative staff of the 9,500 acre ARDC and UNL Extension. The building is strategically located in many diverse environments. Within walking distance, a person can experience the dynamics of a wetland, woodland, a stream, sub-irrigated meadows, agricultural research and production areas. This access enhances educational programming in research-related areas for rural and urban audiences in Nebraska.

The ARDC will play a key role in implementing a strategic course for agriculture and natural resource programs now and in the future.
